TECHNICAL EXPLANATION

Traditional electroacupuncture technique:

The entire needle body is conductive, so while it damages hair follicles, it also causes damage to the epidermis and is prone to scarring.

Insulated electroacupuncture technology:

Insulated electroacupuncture technology: using specially designed insulated needles, only the needle tip part conducts electricity. During hair removal, the conductive needle tip penetrates below the epidermis. As only the conductive part has a destructive effect on the tissue, it effectively destroys hair follicles without damaging the epidermis.

ELECTROLYSIS HAIR REMOVAL

Step 1: Disinfection

To ensure the hygiene and safety of the hair removal area, first clean and disinfect the hair removal area to avoid bacterial infection.

Step 2: Insertion

Use Insulated Needle
•Insert the needle into the hair follicle at the correct angle.
•Apply low-level current to destroy the hair root.

Step 3: Hot and Cold Hammer

•Cold Mode: Use before treatment to numb the skin and reduce pain.
•Hot Mode: Use after treatment to soothe redness and irritation.

Step 4: Insulated Tweezers

•Gently remove the treated hair with insulated tweezers.
•Ensure no residual hair remains in the follicle.

Step 5: Plasma Pen

•Use the plasma pen in low mode to stimulate collagen and promote healing.
•Helps reduce redness and prevent ingrown hairs.
